Parents and Carers Workshop

Primary · Supporting your Autistic child to flourish

Acknowledgement of Country

A close-up photograph of two hands, one from a lighter-skinned person and one from a darker-skinned person, both holding and pouring bright red soil. The soil is falling from the top hand into the bottom hand. The background is a blurred natural setting with green foliage and a clear blue sky. The text "Statement of reconciliation" is overlaid in white on the right side of the image.

Language and autism

Words matter, and people have different preferences.

Identity-first

Many Autistic people prefer "Autistic person". Autism is part of who they are.

Person-first

Some people prefer "person on the autism spectrum". That choice is theirs.

Follow their lead

Use the words your child and your family are comfortable with.

Today we use identity-first language, and we respect every preference.

Discussion activity

What are some things you love or value about your child?

- 1 Think of three things that make them who they are: strengths, joys, interests, connections.
- 2 Write them in your workbook. Not needs or challenges, just who they are.
- 3 Share one with the people at your table, if you would like to.

Parent and carer experience

You know your child

Today builds on what you already know about your child with shared language, useful ideas and practical tools.

Your experience matters

Your knowledge and experiences are welcome here.

A partnership

You are the expert on your child. We bring information about neurodiversity-affirming practice to talk through together.

Young people's voices

What did you notice?

- What stayed with you?
- What would you like to understand more deeply about your child?

Neurodiversity and neurodivergence

Neurodiversity is the whole picture.

Neurotypical and neurodivergent describe brain patterns within neurodiversity.

Autism is one expression of that diversity.

Neurodiversity affirming

Differences are not deficits

Acknowledging different ways of knowing, doing, being and belonging

All people have strengths and experience challenges

There is no right or wrong way to think,
learn or behave

Everyone experiences and interacts with the world differently

Intersectionality

People have many different parts to their identity. When these overlap, they can affect the opportunities, support, barriers and experiences a person has in life.

Autism as difference

Dynamic disability

Your child's capacity can change from minute to minute, day to day and term to term. Same child, different capacity.

Fluctuating capacity

Joy and flourishing

Autistic experience is human experience

Joy, connection and belonging matter.

Every family is different

It can take time to understand and support needs.

Small moments count

Small moments and successes can matter as much as big ones.

Doing things differently

is fine when it helps your family flourish.

Today

We will explore ways to understand needs and find supports that fit.
